AIMS OF THE TECHNICAL MEETING AND VERIFICATION EXERCISE

The scope of this Workshop and Technical Meeting is environmental technology verification. The particular interest is in remediation and monitoring technologies for soil-ground water systems.

The PROMOTE consortium explicitly invites stakeholders of all kind to take an active part in this workshop. Stakeholders we are thinking of are: technology developers/providers, research groups, consultants and service providers, land owners, community representatives, or regulators.

During the Technical Meeting participants could take an approach to the verification system, and could be present during the pilot verification of pre-selected systems.

At stake are results and ideas of the PROMOTE project (see program-me), which are likely to influence further European plans for organising environmental technology verification. By this the European Union would follow examples known from United States, Japan, Canada, and other countries.

Environmental technology verification is meant to overcome market barriers and to support market entrance of new innovative technologies.

PROJECT

The overall aim of the PROMOTE project is to set up an efficiency control and performance verification system for soil-groundwater protection and rehabilitation. The system will be based on a performance verification concept and generic testings as applied by a European network of testing centres. At the same time the PROMOTE consortium is not a closed society but invites stakeholders to actively influence the outcome of the PROMOTE project (see also our CEN workshop).

A strong impact of the results of the PROMOTE project is expected in particular for faster market introduction of new and novel technologies. This is meant to strengthen competitiveness of technology developers in Europe. Special emphasis is taken on SMEs and Eastern European partners. The PROMOTE outcome will have the potential to act as a germ cell of a pre-normative verification system by overcoming implementation barriers and by bridging between innovative and standardised technologies.

PROMOTE is a Specific Targeted REsearch Project (STREP) funded by the 6th Framework Programme of the European Commission. The project is following up the Environmental Technologies Action Plan (ETAP) of the European Union.
